Global Relocation Policies and Procedures

This policy supersedes all prior relocation policies and statements

Time Limitations

Relocation benefits need to be completed within one year of the commencement date in your new position.

Eligible Family Members

This policy covers you, your partner, and dependent children who permanently reside with you. Partner is defined as: spouse, fiancé and domestic partner.

Relocation Consultant

Google has a designated Relocation Service Provider that will assign a Relocation Consultant to work directly with you to assist in managing your relocation. This designated Relocation Consultant will serve as the primary point of contact during your relocation. All expenses should be submitted directly to this Relocation Service Provider unless otherwise directed by Google PeopleOps.

Expense Reimbursement

All relocation expenses must be submitted to the Relocation Consultant with original receipts on a separate Relocation Expense Report. The template relocation expense report, along with instructions for completion, will be provided to you by the Relocation Consultant. Relocation expenses must be submitted within 3 months from the date incurred. No reimbursements will be made for any relocation expenses incurred or submitted beyond one year from the effective date in the new position.

Income Taxes

Even though certain moving expenses may be exempt from income taxes, Google may be required to report them to local tax authorities for informational purposes, depending on the country. In countries requiring information reporting, amounts paid to you, or on your behalf, for moving expenses must be reported as earnings on your income tax return in the calendar year/s when the reimbursements/payments occur.

For international transfers, please discuss this further with PwC during your tax consultation.

For international or US domestic new hires, or for domestic transfers within the US, please consult with your own professional tax advisor for detailed advice.

Note that certain countries may require citizens or permanent residents to continue to report and pay taxes on their worldwide income (e.g., United States – if you are an international transfer or international new hire who holds US citizenship or Green Card status, you must still declare your worldwide income and pay taxes on this in the US, including any relocation/moving expense package from Google, even if not taxable in your destination location). Please consult with your own professional tax advisor for detailed advice for application to your personal circumstances.

Tax Assistance

To lessen the tax burden of relocation, Google will provide tax assistance, or gross ups, on most taxable relocation expenses in the destination location. A "gross up" is an additional payment through payroll made to offset taxes on relocation expenses paid by Google. The purpose of the tax gross up is to lessen your tax burden and may not cover the full tax liability of the relocation expenses.

Google will calculate the gross up on a monthly basis using the gross up tax rate in effect on the date of processing. Tax payments will be remitted directly to the government taxing authorities based on the applicable payroll withholding rate. If there is no withholding tax obligation in the destination location, the gross up will be paid directly to you through local payroll to offset any tax liabilities at the time of filing your annual tax return. Please note the gross up tax rate may differ from your personal effective tax rate. Google will apply the gross up in your destination location only. Any additional taxes due on this benefit in your current (former) location prior to relocation, are your responsibility.

Note that certain countries may require citizens or permanent residents to continue to report and pay taxes on their worldwide income (e.g. United States – if you are an international transfer or international new hire who holds US citizenship or Green Card status, you must still declare your worldwide income and pay taxes on this in the US, including any relocation/moving expense package from Google, even if not taxable in your destination location). Please consult with your own professional tax advisor for detailed advice for application to your personal circumstances.

Repayment to the Company

Upon voluntary termination of employment for any reason, all continuing relocation benefits and reimbursements will cease as of the date of termination. In addition, if the date of termination is within 12 (twelve) months of the commencement date in the new role, you will be required to repay a prorated amount of all relocation benefits. In the event that the total benefits and reimbursements paid out by the Company to you are in excess of $100,000.00 or equivalent local currency and if the date of termination is within 24 (twenty-four) months of the commencement date in the new role, you will be required to repay a prorated amount of all relocation benefits. Should benefits and reimbursements be in excess of $25,000.00 or equivalent local currency, upon termination of employment, you will be required to sign a promissory note with the terms of repayment. Said note will require repayment to be made within 180 days of termination. Repayments may also require an adjustment to taxes that have previously been grossed-up, withheld, and reported, impacting the prorated amount you may be required to pay back.

Policy Interpretation

Google reserves the right to amend or cancel this policy at its discretion. Any questions regarding interpretation should be referred to the Google Relocation Team.

Policy Terms

The purpose of this policy is to define your relocation benefits. Google will provide relocation services and reimbursement of certain moving expenses incurred during your relocation as defined in this policy. The Relocation Service Provider will provide you with assistance in making arrangements to ensure that the relocation is managed in a cost effective manner, but also within a schedule that allows you effectiveness and flexibility. Receipts and documentation are required for reimbursement of all relocation-related expenses. Any Relocation under this policy must be approved by Google Relocation Team with the concurrence of the appropriate Google VP. Approval for exceptions should be coordinated through the Relocation Consultant and Google Relocation Team.

The allowance is contingent on you relocating, your being employed by Google and remaining so employed for a certain period following the Commencement Date. Please review your offer letter or employment agreement, as applicable, and the Relocation policy to understand your repayment obligations.

Car Rental

You are entitled to midsize car rental costs up to the duration indicated in the Table of Relocation Benefits. Google will not cover upgrades, insurance (including but not limited to, liability, loss damage waiver (LDW), collision damage waiver (CDW), gas, GPS systems or other incidental expenses. Your Relocation Consultant will confirm the process for booking your car rental.

If you choose public transportation, rideshare service, or taxi service instead of renting a car, your reimbursement cap will be based on the cost of renting a mid-size car rental for the duration indicated in the Table of Relocation Benefits. You must use this benefit within 90 days from arrival in your new location. You cannot expense taxi or rideshare service over the course of an entire year. Tips are not eligible for reimbursement. You can request reimbursement by submitting proof of cost of a rental car with your travel receipts to your Relocation Consultant.

You agree that any improper requests for the car rental or travel reimbursement may lead to disciplinary action.

Temporary Housing

Google will pay for consecutive days of temporary housing for you and your eligible family members up to duration indicated in the Table of Relocation Benefits. You may opt out of Google's temporary housing and instead receive a housing reimbursement for sourcing your own short term housing (less than 12 months). Google or the Relocation Consultant can provide the reimbursement cap upon request, rates are subject to location. If you are a current Googler, this cap may differ from the hotel caps listed in TRIPS. TRIPS credits cannot be used nor earned for relocation related expenses.

The housing reimbursement will cover room charges or rent payments. If you move out of temporary housing or cancel your request for temporary housing and request housing reimbursement for any unused days, you are responsible for any fees, penalties, or payments associated with your leaving and/or your cancellation of the temporary housing. If you choose to forego temporary housing completely and secure permanent/long term housing (12 months or longer), you may receive a portion of housing reimbursement. Google, or the Relocation Consultant, can provide the reimbursement cap upon request, rates are subject to location. If you are a current Googler, this cap may differ from the hotel caps listed in TRIPS. TRIPS credits cannot be used nor earned for relocation related expenses.

You can request reimbursement by submitting proof of payment to your Relocation Consultant. A copy of the full rental contract will also be required if renting. Google will not reimburse any lodging purchased with credits, points, or rewards provided by any rewards programs, including but not limited to, credit card rewards, frequent flier programs, etc.

If you opt for temporary housing or a housing reimbursement, note additional charges, such as long--distance phone calls, pet costs, parking, utilities, cleaning, laundry, meals, security deposits, lease signing fees, and other incidentals are not covered expenses.

You agree that any unauthorized subletting or renting of temporary housing or any improper requests for the housing reimbursement, for example, “frontloading” the annual rent, may lead to disciplinary action.

Final Transportation to New Location

Google will cover enroute expenses for you and your eligible family members to move to your new residence. Qualified expenses include airfare and ground transportation, mileage/tolls, or rail. Food expenses will be reimbursed for en route meals on the day(s) of travel while traveling to new host location. Your Relocation Consultant will confirm the process for booking your final move trip.

If you are a current Googler, please note that TRIPS credits cannot be used nor earned for relocation related expenses. Final transportation expense reimbursements fall within Google travel policy guidelines. Google will not reimburse flights purchased with credits, points, or rewards including, but not limited, to frequent flier miles provided by any airlines, credit card companies, or other rewards programs. You may receive reimbursement for excess baggage fees. This is capped at 1 bag per person up to 50 lbs/23 kgs.

If driving to final destination, reimbursement will be based off of traveling 400 miles/ 650 km per day along most direct route. Reimbursement includes enroute meals and reasonable lodging expenses.

Language Learning

Google will reimburse local language learning expenses for you and each of your eligible family members up to the amount listed in the table of benefits within a year from your official start date. If the entire allowance is not used, the remaining balance will be forfeited and will not be credited to you. The language learning benefit cap is per eligible relocating individual and cannot be transferred between family members.

Qualifying expenses include language learning classes, language learning app/video subscriptions and learning materials (course books, activity books) required as part of the class curriculum. Language learning is to be self-organised with a provider of your choice.

Note that expenses for courses other than language courses (including children's playgroups), newspaper/magazine subscriptions, as well as movies and books and other incidentals are not covered expenses and will not be reimbursed under this benefit.

Eligibility requirements and reimbursement process details will be communicated to you by your relocation consultant.

Furniture Allowance

You will be paid an allowance in USD equivalent as specified in the Table of Relocation Benefits to assist with purchasing furniture in your destination. This allowance will be paid by Plus within 30 days of finalizing your job offer and relocation package and will be grossed up. Kindly note that by selecting this benefit, you are not eligible to receive the household goods shipment service.
